This book helps to understand what it means to basics of commercial law, students must develop both a foundation of commercial law and an understanding of the key section to achieving their knowledge in commercial law. I wrote this book to provide an empirical study for learning these necessary skills in a way that emphasizes the uniqueness of each commercial law section and each individual concept in commercial law. commercial law starts with basics of law, contract, agency, guarantee and surety and law of sale of good. This text emphasizes the necessary skills in building and maintaining these topic knowledges in order to make decisions and complete skill in commercial law —that is the essence of empirical study of commercial law. The uniqueness of this volume, An Empirical Study of Commercial Law-A Preliminary Study, speaks to five fundamental part of Commercial Law. In this book, learner will discover the unique dynamics of Commercial Law, the essential skills that lead to success. By examining groups from each of these viewpoints, learners come to understand the dynamic capacity of each commercial activities and their significance. In essence, the goal of this text is to provide a toolbox from Meaning and objects, Capacity to contract, Contract of Agency, Contract of indemnity and guarantee Law of sale of goods. To start this process, students must first become aware of their own ways of corporate law in which it can be improved to enhance study. The emphasis here is on critical thinking, skills assessment, and practice.
